skbudke@leversonbudke.com PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCES

Steve focuses his practice in the areas of general criminal defense with a heavy emphasis on expungements and restoration of gun rights. He has negotiated numerous favorable outcomes for his clients and has successfully argued page 1 / 4 dismissal in many others. If you have been charged with a crime, you need an attorney who understands the complexities of the law and the real life implications of all potential outcomes. Steve knows a good attorney does more than stand next to you while pleading you guilty. A good attorney fights for you and makes sure your rights are being protected. If you have already been convicted of a crime, and the effects of that conviction have lingered longer than necessary, Steve can help you ask the court to seal those records. In addition to providing a high level of criminal defense advocacy, Steve has been an adjunct professor at William Mitchell College of Law and Mitchell Hamline College of Law. He teaches Criminal Law, Constitutional Criminal Procedure, and Evidence.
